This five bay by one bay, two and a half story, T-shaped house sits on a hill facing east.

Built on fieldstone foundations, the house is constructed of common bonded brick which has been painted a light beige. On the east elevation five poured concrete steps, flanked by a wrought iron railing, lead to a stoop shielded by a shed roof and supported by two square posts. The east door is wooden paneled and surmounted by a two light transom. The south elevation of the west ell has three poured concrete steps which lead up to a stoop. The south door is wooden paneled, flanked by a two light side-light and surmounted by a three light transom.

There are six-over-six double-hung windows set into segmental arches on the east, north and south elevations and flanked by putty colored louvered wooden shutters. There are two four light windows in the north and south gable ends.

The house has an intersecting gable roofs with wooden shingles. There are two interior chimneys at the north and south gable ends.

The east door opens into a central hall. An open string single-run staircase with winders ascends along the south wall. It has a chamfered newel post with a pyramidal peak and turned balusters. North of the hall is the family room and south of the hall is the living room. The kitchen is in the west ell.

The floors are random width planking and the walls and ceilings are plaster over lath. The walls are covered by wall paper. There are molded surrounds and wooden paneled doors. The two doors from the central hall to the family room have unusually thick walls. This suggests that the north room was a later addition. There are iron bars on all the cellar windows.

BUILDER/ARCHITECT

Charles Ford

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

This commodious dwelling, located near Great Falls, Maryland, has survived the encroachments of suburbia, and today stands amidst a spreading, upper-income housing development.

In 1871, 396 3/8 acres of various, contiguous tracts, the largest of which was some 194 acres of "Thompson's Pasture" and "Resurvey on Thompson's Pasture", amassed by David Crawford by a series of late 18th century purchases, were offered at public auction. This action resulted from foreclosure proceedings of a deed of trust of the owner, Mary M. Kearney. The land was described at that time as:

..beautifully located on the road from Offutt's crossroads to Great Falls of the Potomac, about 1 1/2 miles from Offutt's crossroads and a short distance from the Great Falls of the Potomac, sloping to the road and canal and very susceptible of improvements... the soil is good and the place is well wooded and watered. The wood consists of oak, chestnut and pine. The improvements consist of a log house and some outbuildings. There is a fine apple orchard on the place, and some pears and other fruit.¹

The land was purchased by Robert P. Dodge, of Washington, D.C., for $2,910.² Dodge apparently bought the property for speculative purposes only, as he sold the farm four months later to Samuel Ford, also of Washington, D.C., for $5,000.³

Samuel Ford owned the property for 13 years, but seems to have made very few, if any, improvements to the property during his ownership. From all indications he remained in Washington, and assumed the role of absentee landlord.

In 1884 he sold the property to his brother, Charles Ford, for $6,000.⁴ Charles Ford was a prosperous merchant, owning and operating brickyards in Alexandria and Washington. This explains his choice of building materials when, in 1886, he began construction of a new dwelling on his Montgomery County farm. By February of 1887,⁵ the new brick house of Charles Ford was reported as being complete.

Charles Ford died in 1899, and by his will (made February 22, 1899, probated June 16, 1899) he directed that "the farm and outlying tract near Great Falls (including) the horses, cattle, tools, farming implements and household furniture" be disposed of at the discretion of his executors.⁶ (Charles Ford was temporarily residing at North East, Cecil County, Maryland, at the time of his death.) The property was retained by the Ford heirs until 1915, when the house and a surrounding 206.26 acres were sold to James Eckersley for $45,000.⁷ Eckersley, in turn, sold the property one week later to Robert Pennington of Wilmington, Delaware, for $126,000.⁸ Pennington conveyed the farm in 1922 to the Potomac Corporation.⁹

The land since the last-mentioned conveyance has been in corporate holdings. In 1923, the land was sold to the Tilden Corporation, which then sold the property to the Great Falls Farm Corporation in 1931, from which W.C. and A.N. Miller Development Company purchased the house and land in 1969.¹⁰ The present owners purchased the house and two acres from the Miller Company.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (if known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The house is a two-story, brick house sitting on a stone foundation. The main (east) facade is five bays with a central doorway and 6/6 double hung sash windows. Over the doorway there is a narrow transom light. The arches over the windows are segmentally arched and one stretcher tall. At either end, there are flush gable chimneys. The cornice is boxed, with ogee crown mouldings. Across the facade, there is a one story porch with square posts. At either end, small gable roofed enclosed porches provide access to the cellar.

The house was built in two sections. The south end was originally an end hall and parlor house with a three bay facade. Later, the north end was added. Both are laid-up in common bond. The joint between the two is visible in the facade brickwork.

There have been service additions to the rear facade. There is a small, brick A-roofed outbuilding with an arched doorway and double doors. The stone barn is low, with framed gable ends.
